

Screening with Enamels

When: Jan. 1 – Jan. 21, 2018

I am so excited to offer this popular online class again. I've learned a lot from students in earlier classes and know it will be a great learning adventure for all. I will have video demonstrations, photos with detailed descriptions, list of suppliers, and be on hand to answer all your questions.

* I will cover the different ways you can make a thermal screen (if you purchased a laser printer for my decal class you can use it again here)

* Dry screening

* Screening your own decals

* Anything and everything that goes along with this exciting process

We all know enameling is rather labor intensive so screening enamels is a great way to speed up your work and make multiples to help you become more efficient and productive. Very detailed screens are possible with photo silkscreens. Once a screen is made it can be used indefinitely and much faster than hand painting or drawing. If you make production pieces this could help speed things up a lot. But it also adds a different look all together that you could not get any other way. If you have the general enamel supplies you will most likely have everything you need except the screens and the materials to make them.

Since there are many ways to go about it, you can view the video demonstrations and other class materials and decide which way you want to go about it. There are many printing variables and we will go over many of them. I will provide a list of suppliers for all the materials. In general, the cost for screening supplies will be between $100 (USD) to $200 (USD).

Like my other online classes, it will be work at your own pace and everyone will be able access all the materials in a private Facebook page. On Jan. 1, I will enter you in the class group. Make sure you friend me on Facebook so I can add you to the class. This self-paced procedure has worked well in my previous classes especially when everyone shares their screened enamels and other discoveries with your fellow classmates.

The cost is $175 (USD) and can be paid through PayPal. I will send you a PayPal request to register upon request by contacting me at annemargaretdinan@gmail.com.

I am offering three scholarships for this class. It will bring the cost of the class down to $100. The first three people to ask will receive one. (Refund Policy: Refunds will only be granted if requested two weeks before the class start date.)

Thank you and see you in January.
